A Word from His Grace

by Duke Kate Ghanston

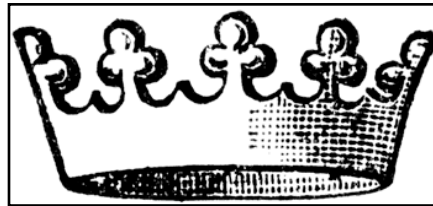

We are half way through the reign. We just had midreign, we had BBQ chicken, potato salad, and baked beans. It was good, I hope you had some.

I had some concerns about the number of roses I was giving out. Nineteen. Nineteen!

If I was concerned, some of you might be concerned. I thought I'd try to address that.

Service to the club should be its own reward. By that same token, the monarch is responsible for recognizing service. Those nineteen roses went to twelve different people. Only one of whom received three..

I thought long and hard about some; cross-referenced with the ORK. I was surprised that very few of the recipients had many roses. The guy who got the three roses only had one before. I had intended to give another only one for a number of efforts, until I found how many roses he didn't have.

After long thought and consideration, I am confident that the recognition given was appropriate for the work done and I am proud that the duchy has such committed people. I hope I get the opportunity to honor many of them again.

The Spot where the Regent Address would be, if she wasn't, y'know, kidnapped (Exedor mock reading Dru-kara's journal) "Dear Diary...today I was pompous and my sister was crazy." (flips page) "Today, I was kidnapped by hill folk never to be seen again. It was the best day ever."

Ok. So I swiped that line from one of the best television series ever and modified it a bit for my purpose.

Anyway, the dirty hippies up north in the Shire of Lost Souls kidnapped our Regent. Really, can we let that go? I don't think so. I think we should go up there tomorrow and get her back. If we happen to annihilate the offending forces in the process, I can live with that. Perhaps they will simply hand her over, but from what I've heard, that seems unlikely.

A CALL TO ARMS

As a concerned citizen:

We have learned of a nefarious band of brigands who call themselves 'The Lost Souls.' They are headquartered up North, and have managed to capture our Regent, Dru-kara. I say its time we truly made these fools loose their souls. A caravan is scheduled to leave Pegasus Valley tomorrow, on its way to the Iron Mountains. This is the perfect time, under the pretense of guarding the cargo, to travel North and deal with those who would threaten our citizens.

Pegasus Valley must not stand idle while any one person or group threatens us. To do so implicates that we are weak, and unable to defend ourselves from brigands. So take up this clarion call.

Sharpen your swords, prepare your spellbooks and lets crush these upstarts under our hob-nailed boots.

In the name of Dru-kara, and all that is right and decent - let loose the wing'd horses of war!

Lord Theodoxus

WOW, THE NEW GUILDMASTER OF REEVES IS A NOT WORDY GUY THIS TIME!

Just a note to let you know I'm here... nothing really new to report. I would like to thank Lor for helping reeve; makes the job easier when there's another pair of eyes on the field. That is all.

[Ok, that was way too short, Theo. You should have talked about how you plan to have more battlegames and encouraging roleplay. That would all be real nice. -Exedor]

A WORD FROM THE PRIME MINISTER (OK, MORE THAN ONE)

The summer months are coming and we are already seeing an increase in attendance. Let's keep it up! In the last month we've had the Highland Games fund raiser and Midreign. Our gross income from these events was over $250!

Congratulations to our newest 6th level Anti-Paladin Grand Duke Sir Alucard.

Baron Styxx
Prime Minister of Pegasus Valley
